

Vox Telecom launches Voxair Teleconferencing

Staff Writer MyBroadband | 22 July, 2010

Vox Telecom today announced the launch of Voxair, a teleconferencing solution for both multi-branched businesses and out of office users

Voxair is a secure teleconferencing solution, which offers separate billing for each participant, as well as the option for participants to make use of their free minutes. It is further free to existing customers when calling from the Vox network.

To use the service participants dial 01 0001 0001 from any telephone line (fixed or mobile) in South Africa, enter a 4 digit conference call ID and PIN and join the conference. No reservations or contracts are required and no limit to the number of participants or duration of call.

"With the high costs of air travel, both from a financial and time investment point of view, Voxair offers an affordable time-saving alternative, as well as increasing business productivity," Vox said in a press statement.

Email Digg Twitter Facebook

Related news

- Vox Telecom launches Voxair Teleconferencing
- Warning: Piracy over P2P a crime
- ICASA withdraws scarce spectrum ITAs
- More international bandwidth coming to SA
- Neotel prepaid here soon

Forum Discussions

- Emails not showing up in inbox
- How to convert almost any kind of DVD to iPad?
- How to Convert DVD and Video to Your iPad
- Time for Government to sell Telkom
- Being forced to overinsure!?

Top News

Warning: Piracy over P2P a crime

Media reports suggest that piracy isn't a crime in South Africa, but it turns out that it in the case of peer-to-peer technologies it can be

Android fragmentation

Six releases in 18 months. Is it too much?